On Thursday, January 24, guests gathered at the beautiful new custom home of John and Margaret Ann Montgomery in Franklin, to celebrate the flourishing interior design and creative community in Nashville.

The night celebrated the creative energy that makes Nashville special and all the people that contribute to it.

Party goers enjoyed passed bites courtesy of Southall Farms, unique libations from Zachary Helton (also known as the "drink whisperer"), and musical stylings by Reed Turchi.

The evening was made possible by Textures, Grahams Living, Peachey Wood Products, and Nashville Lifestyles.

To our friends in the Interior Design Community:

It was an honor to spend an evening amongst our talented and inspirational peers who make our lives more beautiful. Our Interior Design community is full of energy and creativity that is contagious to all that they know. Although making spaces beautiful is what you "do", it was so much fun to find out who you "are". Many of you are entrepreneurs pursuing your passion and gifts and I am hopeful that you were able to find community in our gathering. We work in a dynamic and fascinating arena, where creativity and vision are on full display. Courage is a word that is not used often enough to describe a designer, but I believe this value personifies this group. Thank you for being part of this event and being wonderful stewards of your gifts. You truly inspire many through your design and we are so proud to be a partner and friend. We are already looking forward to the next time...
